DO / TACOMA

Born in the U.S.A.

This fall, 30 Americans makes its West Coast debut at the Tacoma Art Museum. The exhibition, which has broken attendance records since opening in Miami in 2008, showcases 45 eye-catching works by prominent African American artists of the past three decades. You'll see pieces by Kehinde Wiley, who paints contemporary people in a classic style once reserved for European aristocrats, and Kara Walker, who renders the Camptown Ladies as black, cut-paper silhouettes. Some of the works explore the themes of race, civil rights, and black identity. For a deep dive into these ideas, visit on October 20, TAM's free third Thursday, when the museum will host a moderated panel on racism. $15; through Jan 15; 1701 Pacific Ave.; tacomaartmuseum.org.

/ WOODINVILLE

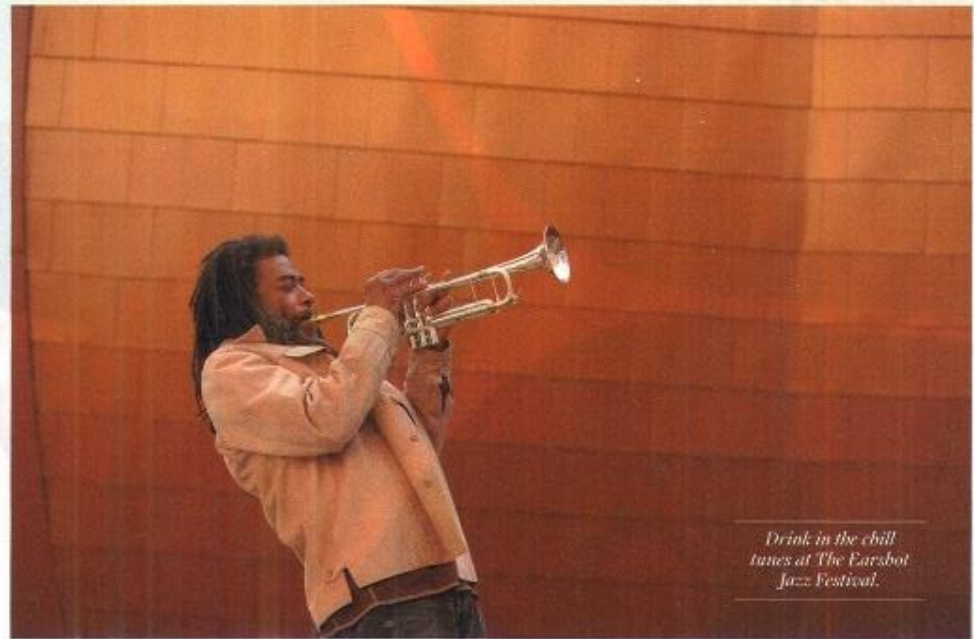

The autumn chill means only one thing: It's time for pumpkin. Pumpkin pie, pumpkin pancakes, pumpkin cookies. Now, you can even drink your pumpkin, thanks to the enterprising folks at Locust Cider. This month, the cider house pours pints of Real Pumpkin, a brew made with fresh pumpkin, apples, and a dash of pumpkin pie spices—which, unlike that Thanksgiving staple of pumpkin pie, is gluten-free. Try a taster, sip a pint, or grab a growler to go while you can; it's available only while supplies last. For a pumpkin pairing experience, come on Sunday, when Locust hosts rotating food trucks. $10/flight; 19151 144th Ave. N.E.; locustcider.com.

/ YAKIMA

Oct 1 Roughly 75 percent of the nation's hops are grown in the Yakima Valley. And the soft blossoms are picked and ready to brew just in time for the Drink in the chill tunes at The Earshot Jazz Festival.

Fresh Hop Ale Festival, where more than 40 breweries from up and down the West Coast show off their best harvest beers. These are fresh-hopped brews (most beers are made with dry hop pellets), meaning they're fragrant, delicately flavored, and available for just a short time. The festival takes over downtown Yakima with live music and a roving Beer Bike stocked with a rotating keg of small-batch brews. Tickets include a collectible pint glass and three half-pint drink tickets. concerts over five weeks. Highlights include shows from Wynton Marsalis with the Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra and local guitarist Bill Frisell (from $50), plus a tribute to Jones and Anderson (performed by members from Garfield High School, their alma mater). earshot.org.

/ DOWNTOWN

Oct 7-9 For one weekend this month, the Seattle Symphony will feel like Las Vegas. Cirque de la Symphony, a group that combines musical performances with acrobatics, juggling, and high-flying aerial feats, will sweep through Benaroya Hall in a flash of spangled finery. Shows are choreographed to movie scores, including Raiders of the Lost Ark and Chariots of Fire. Come with an appetite, as beloved Pioneer Square restaurant Delicatus plans to open a new branch here in September. From $34; 200 University St.; seattlesymphony.org.

DO

/ SEATTLE

Oct 7-Nov 11 Seattle has always had a vibrant jazz scene, going back to Quincy Jones and the late Ernestine Anderson, who got their start in the Emerald City. The Earshot Jazz Festival, in its 28th season, showcases the old-school masters while opening the door for new talents, with more than 50
